Ancestry's New Image Colorization Feature Brings Your Black and White Photos to Life

Ancestry Team Blog, Jun 02, 2022

We all love looking at old black and white family photos for a trip down memory lane. But imagine seeing a photo of your great-grandmother with her vibrant red hair and piercing blue eyes. Now that's possible with Ancestry's new colorization feature. You can bring your ancestors to life with color-enhanced images that you can easily share with family.

More Ways to Restore

Ancestry already enables you to capture, digitize, retouch and preserve old family photos and now, we're introducing a new feature to enhance images through a colorization tool. You can colorize black and white photos, gaining a more vivid, real-life snapshot of your ancestors and their lives.

"The popularity of image enhancement and sharing continues so we've invested in even more tools to make this easier for our community," said Crista Cowan, Corporate Genealogist at Ancestry. "Over the past two months we've seen over 29 million image uploads - and with each image uploaded, our community has the opportunity to engage and uncover new discoveries and share with dozens of family members around the world."

With our partnership with media preservation and archiving specialist company Photomyne, the suite of image enhancement tools now available to Ancestry users will give you even more ways to make family history discoveries and bring them to life through image enhancement.

President's Message

Hello MAGG Members,

I'm sure many of you have been wondering what happened to MAGG? Well, other than the effects of Covid, changes in life, family, health and whatever else can happen, I think it did. But you have my assurance, that with your help, we will get back to where we were.

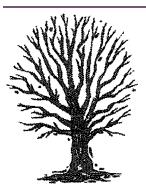

What does that mean? It means that one person or one couple cannot keep a group running. We have tried doing the virtual talks, with a few watching. We have tried a combination virtual and in-person presentations, again with a few attending. And we have tried just in person, with the same few attending. But what does it take to get members into the group and members attending meetings? I know many of our members live in other towns, even other states. MAGG is their connection to doing genealogy research in the Marshfield area.

Let me ask you a few questions. First, how many of you buy groceries? Everyone or almost everyone. What have you noticed when you get to the cash register? Have you gone out to eat lately? What did you notice when you got your check? Have any of you gone to make printed copies of things at an Office Max, Staples, Kinkos or your favorite copy center? What did you notice? Finally, do any of you send greeting cards, hand written thank you notes, or letters? When you go to the post office to buy stamps, what have you noticed? The common theme with all of these activities is that prices have gone up. MAGG has not increased prices in over 30 years. Our bank account has hit bottom.

We have tried adding a separate fee for print newsletters and sending out digital newsletters as much as possible. But, one of the reasons for the last newsletter going out late and this one, being more than late, was there wasn't enough in our account to print them, much less than send them out.

So what am I proposing? Do we raise membership dues? Raise the fee for print newsletters? Ask for donations? I am asking for your input and your support! We have projects that we want to complete...for example finishing the genealogy index of birth, marriage and deaths from the Marshfield newspapers. We need to be able to update and sustain our website, just to name a few. Email me your thoughts before our next meeting on March 23rd or bring them to our meeting. We can do this, together!

Vickie,

Your inclusion of the 1941 Marshfield High Honor Society photo [in the last newsletter] caught my eye, but unfortunately it missed my mother's class by one year. So here's the Honor Society photo from the 1940 yearbook.

My mother, Helen Duval, and her twin sister Evelyn are there, and so are Mel Laird, U.S. Secretary of Defense (1969-1973), and his Assistant Secretary, Robert Froehlke, who then served as Secretary of the Army (1971-1973).

Enjoy!

Seven Family History Activities for When You Can't Focus From Amy Johnson Crow's Blog, October 27, 2022, Posted April 2, 2020

Genealogy is something that countless people find enjoyable and rewarding. In this time of crisis, it's natural to turn to it... but many of us have found ourselves unable to concentrate. Fortunately, that doesn't mean we can't do something. Here are 7 family history activities that we can do, even when we can't focus.

It can feel frustrating, even discouraging, to have time on your hands but an inability to focus on research. After all, haven't many of us joked, "Oh if only I had all day where I could sit at home and work on my genealogy..." Many of us now have that time, due to stay-at-home orders, but it certainly isn't what we envisioned. But even though we might not be able to concentrate to do some in-depth research, we can still do meaningful and enjoyable family history activities.

I. Label Some Photographs

You know you need to do this (or maybe I'm just projecting). Grab a handful of photos and a soft pencil or archivally safe pen and label the back of the photo with the who-what-when-where-and-why. Record as much as you know about that image. Not only is this incredibly important in our family history, but it's a fun activity, too!

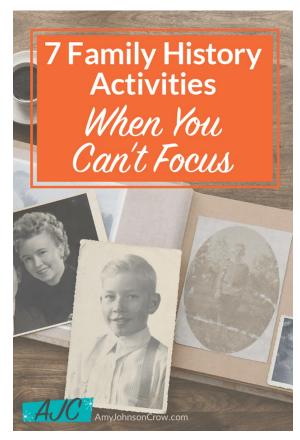

2. Scan Some Photographs and Documents

Now that you have some photos labeled, get out the scanner, camera, or your smartphone, and make a digital copy. I have a stack of letters that my grandfather wrote to my grandmother while they were courting. Now would be the perfect time for me to digitize those.

3. Share With Family

Social distancing doesn't mean no communication. Share some of those photos and documents with your family via email, Facebook, or even text. Not only does it get a copy of that image in another place (following the "Lots of Copies Keep Stuff Safe" principle), but it can also spark dialogue... which brings us to our next activity...

4. Interview Family Members and Share Stories Humans are built for stories, and those stories are even more important in times of distress. Photos are a great way to spark conversation. They don't even have to be old photos of our ancestors. Photos of family reunions or holidays can be a great starting point for sharing stories. Remember: We are all a part of our own family histories. We need to get our stories out there, too!

Here are some resources for gathering stories:

- "Creating Oral Histories" by FamilySearch https://www.familysearch.org/en/wiki/ Creating Oral Histories

5. Journal Your Experience During the Pandemic

I'll be honest — I hoard notebooks and journals. I don't necessarily write in all of the ones that I buy, but I have quite a collection. Since things started getting crazy a few weeks ago, I started a journal to rec-(Continued on page 5, "Family Activities") ord my experience. It serves two purposes. If it's ever discovered by a descendant years from now, they'll have an idea of what this time was like. But it's also been cathartic to write in it.

I've had trouble in the past keeping going with a journal, but I've been consistent this time. Two things that have helped me: I don't force myself to write every day (which, ironically, has made me feel more free to write almost every day!) and I don't feel the need to follow a set format. Some days are pages long, while other days are only a couple of sentences. I write down my experiences, my observations, and my feelings. As I said, it has been quite cathartic.

6. Index Records for FamilySearch

Did you know that many of the records that you use on FamilySearch were indexed by volunteers people just like you and me. You can help right from home! FamilySearch has indexing projects for record sets around the world. (In fact, they're always looking for people who can read languages other than English. But don't worry, there are plenty of Englishlanguage records that you can work on, too.) You can find tutorials and get started on the Family-Search Indexing website.

The batches are small, so you can make progress right away. I've been an indexer for quite some time. You might be amazed at how enjoyable it is!

7. Use the WANDER Method

What about when we really want to research? How can we stay focused then?

We genealogists sometimes joke about falling into rabbit holes in our research. Somehow, we find ourselves researching our 3rd-cousin's grandfather's next-door-neighbor's son-in-law. How did we get there?!

When we want to do research, it's always a good idea to be focused, and that's especially true when our ability to concentrate is at a premium. Having a good research method is key.

The WANDER Method is a way of viewing the research process to help keep you focused and on track.

The steps are: W – What do you want to find?

- A Analyze what you already have
- N Note what is missing
- D Discover new records
- E Evaluate everything
- R Repeat as necessary

That first step – what do you want to find — by itself can help you stay focused. (You can learn more about the WANDER Method here. https:// www.amyjohnsoncrow.com/genealogy-researchprocess-wander-method/)

This is a confusing, stressful time we're in. Fortunately, there are still things we can do to stay engaged with the family history that we love. How are you working on your genealogy right now?

anyone who has family photos they want to enhance," said Connie Knox of Genealogy TV and Ancestry user. "Previously, I used several third party apps to upload, scan, crop and colorize but with these new features on Ancestry, adding images to my family tree, sharing and enhancing is so much easier and faster– allowing me to make even more family history discoveries."

How To Use

To use the colorization feature on mobile, simply click into an image and tap 'Edit'. On the Ancestry website, click the wrench icon and then 'Edit Photo'. Using the multicolored 'Colorize' icon, you can see the colorized photo in comparison to the original. Even after you save the original, you can always revert back to the original—so you never have to worry about losing the original image.

Share Your Photos Today

All Ancestry members can now upload individual images or photo albums previously added to their Ancestry account. You can then apply auto-cropping on scanned images, rotate on your mobile device, and colorize your images using these new photo enhancements on your own family trees or any you collaborate on. The colorization feature is available on both the Ancestry website and mobile app starting today. From https://www.ancestry.com/corporate/blog/ancestrys-newimage-colorization-feature-brings-your-black-and-white-photos-life

Have You Ever Searched For Passport Records?

The National Archives has a very helpful website. They state:

"Passport applications can be an excellent source of genealogical information, especially about foreignborn individuals.

Foreign travel in the nineteenth century was much NARA) has passport applications from Oct. 1795-Mar. 1925. The U.S. Department of State has custody of passport applications from April 1925 to the present.

The National Archives has microfilmed the passport schedules, and most have been digitized by our digitization partners, and are available online and at all NARA facilities."

Passport applications will list date of birth, place of birth, have a physical description, detail if they were naturalized and if the application was submitted before December 21, 1914, it will have a picture. My great-great uncle Herman Menne's passport application lists his name and birth date in Germany. It says his father was Anton Menne, who is deceased. It details his emigration to the United States through the port of Bremen in April of 1912. He states he has resided in the United States for the past 10 years from 1912-1922 in San Francisco. He was naturalized on March 8, 1922 and it also lists his occupation as machinist. He is asking for a passport so he can journey to Germany, France, Belgium and Holland for business reasons.

Applications also offer a description of the applicant. For my great-great uncle, it says he is 35 years old. He is 5 feet 7 inches of medium build with blue eyes and blond hair. He has a straight nose, a medium mouth, a round face and chin and a fair complexion. There is also a testimonial from a friend testifying they are who they say they are. In this case, Henry Arendes of 2907 Folsom St., declares he has known him for 5 years and "solemnly swears" he is who he says he is.

Through the NARA website, it will also take you to online sources of the passport records housed at Ancestry.com (need a subscription), Family Search (free), or Fold 3 (need a subscription). A database allows you to search for your ancestor's passport records. I was able to find my great-great uncle Herman Menne, which also had his picture as a young man (see below). Be sure you check the back of the document where the photo is.

Genealogist's Christmas Eve ('Twas the night before Christmas)

'Twas the night before Christmas When all through the house Not a creature was stirring. Not even a mouse.

The dining room table with clutter was spread With pedigree charts and with letters which said... "Too bad about the data for which you wrote; Sank in a storm on an ill-fated boat."

Stacks of old copies of wills and such Were proof that my work had become too much. Our children were nestled all snug in their bed, While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads. Had I not been busy with grandparent's wills, I'd not have forgotten to shop for such thrills, While others bought gifts to bring Christmas cheers, I'd spent time researching those birthdates and years.

While I was thus musing about my sad plight, A strange noise on the lawn gave me such a great fright. Way to the window I flew in a flash, Tore open the drapes and yanked up the sash.

When what with my wondering eyes should appear, But an overstuffed sleigh and eight small reindeer. Up to the house top the reindeer they flew, With a sleigh full of toys and 'ole Santa Clause, too.

And then in a twinkle, I heard on the roof The prancing and pawing of thirty-two hoofs. As I drew in my head, and bumped it on the sash, Down the cold chimney fell Santa—KER-RASH!

"Dear" Santa had come from the roof in a wreck, And tracked soot on the carpet, (I could wring his short neck!) Spotting my face, good 'ole Santa could see I had no Christmas spirit you'd have to agree.

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work And filled all the stockings, (I felt like a jerk). Here was Santa, who'd brought us such gladness and joy: When I'd been too busy for even one toy.

He spied my research on the table all spread "A genealogist!" He cried! (My face was all red!) "Tonight I've me many like you, "Santa grinned, As he pulled from his sack a large book he had penned.

I gazed with amusement—the cover it read Genealogy Lines for Which You Have Plead. "I know what it's like as a genealogy bug." He said as he gave me a great Santa hug.

"while the elves make the sleighful of toys I now carry I do some research in the North Pole Library! A special treat I am thus able to bring, To genealogy folk who can't find a thing."

Now off you go to your bed for a rest, I'll clean up the house from this genealogy mess." As I climbed up the stairs full of gladness and glee, I looked back at Santa who'd brought much to me.

While settling in bed, I heard Santa's sleigh whistle. To his teacm, which then rose like the down of a thistle. And I heard him exclaim as he flew out of sight, "Family History is Fun! Merry Christmas! Goodnight!

Five Veterans of World War Unit Serving Together at Camp Shelby gether at Camp Shelby Five World War veterans who served overseas in the same company are today serving in the seme regiment in Uncle Sam's new army.

Three of these veterans are residents of Marshfield; a fourth is well known here and at Stevens Point; and the fifth is known among local ex-service men.

The three local men are Capt. A. J. Rasmussen, Warrent Officer Charles L. Braem, and Technical Sergeant Maynard L. Peterson. The fourth is Major Leon S. Eagleburger of Waupun and the fifth is Capt. Frederick E. Mott, Madison.

From Bugler To Major

All were members of the Headquarters Company, 127th Infantry, during the World War days. The first four were members of the 127th Infantry Band — Marshfield's World War band. Today, all are "oldtimers" in the 135th Medical Regiment, which is in training at Camp Shelby, Miss.

Major Eagleburger, who was a bugler during the World War, commands the Second (ambulance) Battalion of the 135th Medical Regiment. Captain Rasmussen, who commanded the band overseas, is adjutant of Major Eagleburger's battalion now.

The 135th Medical Regiment Band is headed by Charles L. Braem, the drummer boy with the smile that won't come off. Like Captain Rasmussen, Braem did service on the Mexican border, served overseas and was mustered out upon his return to the States. Both re-entered the service in 1926 when the 135th was organized and last November when Rasmussen was promoted to captain, Braem moved up to warrant officer.

Old Boys Know Ropes

That promotion paved the way for another oldtimer, Maynard L. Peterson, whose service dates back to April, 1917. He became technical sergeant, after having served from 1936. As technical sergeant, he is also first sergeant of the Band. It isn't difficult to understand why the youngsters of the band look upon Rasmussen, Braem and Peterson as foster parents. "The old boys" know the ropes and keep the younger generation on the straight and narrow military path.

Capt. Frederick E. Mott, M. A. C. regimental supply officer and commander of the service company, 135th Medical Regiment is a laboratory technician at Bradley Memorial Hospital, Madison, when he is in his civilian clothes. Like the other "oldtimers" of the 135th, Mott re-enlisted in the military service after serving gallantly overseas. He was a regimental runner in the famous 32nd Division and was wounded in the right forearm; later he was gassed. His experience seemed to whet his appetite for more military service and today he is taking his year of training at Camp Shelby.

Making Good Record

In civil life, Captain Rasmussen is a stock and bond broker with offices in the Central State Bank Building. He entered this work after the bank holiday and during his absence, Mrs. Rasmussen is "holding the fort." Braem has been in the postal service for many years and has a leave of absence from those duties now. Peterson has been employed in Marshfield in various capacities. Major Eagleburger is a practicing physician and surgeon at Waupun. He took up the study of medicine after World War I.

Needless to say, the 135th Medical Regiment is making a splendid record at Camp Shelby. The units lost no time in clearing up their areas, building duckboard walks, filling holes, and, generally, making the place presentable and livable. The "outfit" is known as the Bull regiment but has not seen fit to adopt that insignia, although there are constant threats to keep a young bull tied out somewhere in the regiment's area.

The Order of Call Is Given For Clark County Boys in First War Draft This list ran in the Clark County Press, April 9 & 16, 1942.

We will run the list in upcoming newsletters until completed.

Recruits for the great army which Uncle Sam is raising will be contributed by Clark county from the list below. This is the list of the names of those in the war draft, the men of 20 to 45. With each name will be found his order number first, which indicates the relative order in which he will be called. The second number given is the serial number by which he is known in the registration.

This reserve of manpower is created in addition to those previously registered.

The order of call was determined by the great national lottery, conducted at Washington, with drawings from the now-famous fish bowl.

The Press published this week the list in alphabetical order up to and including those whose names begin with the letter "L." The remainder will be published next week.
